Kirsten Cornelison is an Assistant Professor of Economics at the University of Notre Dame. Her research focuses on the role of social interactions in perpetuating inequality by race and gender; she also does work on the economics of the family, and on immigration.

La Donna Forsgren is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Film, Television, and Theatre and concurrent faculty with the Gender Studies program. She is the author of In Search of Our Warrior Mothers: Women Dramatists of the Black Arts Movement (Northwestern UP 2018). Her research focuses on issues related to African American theatre and performance, dramaturgy, black feminist theories, and Black nationalism.

Richard Jones is the Annenberg Director of the Gallivan Program in Journalism, Ethics and Democracy at the University of Notre Dame. Rich joined Notre Dame after spending nearly 20 years working as a journalist, including a decade at The New York Times.

Charlice Hurst is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Management & Organization at the Medoza College of Business. The primary focus of her research is on interpersonal dynamics in the workplace and how interpersonal relationships influence well-being and performance. In particular, she examines the roles of personality and gender in shaping interpersonal relationships between coworkers and between leaders and followers.

Janet Kourany is an Associate Professor of Philosophy and also Associate Professor of Gender Studies at the University of Notre Dame, where she is also a Fellow of the Reilly Center for Science, Technology, and Values. Her research areas include philosophy of science, science and social values, philosophy of feminism, and the new interdisciplinary area of ignorance studies. The author of several books, she is currently working on a new book entitled Forbidden Knowledge: The Social Construction and Management of Ignorance. Her interest in sexual harassment stems not only from my research in feminist philosophy but also from my longtime work on the American Philosophical Association Committee on the Status of Women.

Veronica Root is an Associate Professor of Law. She researches issues related to corporate compliance, drawing on scholarship from the areas of professional ethics, corporate governance, employment law, corporate social responsibility, and organizational behavior. She investigates the institutional mechanisms that private firms can utilize to (i) improve long-term compliance with legal and regulatory requirements, (ii) promote greater ethicality within organizational environments, and (iii) encourage the development of diversity and inclusion norms.

Jim Sterba professor of philosophy at the University of Notre Dame, has published twenty-seven books, including the award-winning Justice for Here and Now (1998), Three Challenges to Ethics (2001), and The Triumph of Practice over Theory in Ethics (2005). He is past president of the American Section of International Society for Social and Legal Philosophy, Concerned Philosophers for Peace, the North American Society for Social Philosophy, and the Central Division of the American Philosophical Association. He has edited with Linda Le Moncheck Sexual Harassment: Issues and Answers for Oxford University Press. Recently, Jim received a grant from the John Templeton Foundation to do research and run two conferences on bringing the yet untapped resources of ethics to bear on the problem of evil.

Ann Tenbrunsel is the David E. Gallo Professor of Ethics in the College of Business Administration at the University of Notre Dame. She received her PhD and her MBA from Northwestern University and her B.S.I.O.E. from the University of Michigan. Her research interests focus on the psychology of ethical decision making, examining why employees, leaders and students behave unethically, despite their best intentions to behave to the contrary. Ann is the author, co-author, or co-editor of six books on this topic—including Blind Spots (with Max Bazerman), Behavioral Ethics: Shaping an Emerging Field (with David De Cremer), and Codes of Conduct: Behavioral Research into Business Ethics (with David Messick)—and numerous research articles and chapters.
